Everyone's Electricals (EE)

Everyone's Electricals (EE) has a chain of shops selling all types of household electrical goods at very low prices. The business has been trading for many years and was a private limited company. The Directors recently converted it to a public limited company. The business imports all of its electrical goods from several countries, mainly from Country Z.

The types of electrical goods sold by EE are televisions, DVD players, video recorders, audio equipment, MP3 players, washing machines, fridges, freezers and computer equipment. Sales of video recorders have been falling in the last year but sales of the large screen television sets have increased after they first went on sale in the shops.

EE owns shops across the whole country. 375 people are employed in its shops and 75 people are employed at head office. The shop employees have received on-the-job training in customer service and have been provided with information about the products they sell. They are proud that there are very few customer complaints as they give good advice on the best products to buy and replace products if there are any problems.

The Directors of EE want to increase the number of its shops from 25 and they are thinking about taking over a chain of rival electrical shops, Budget Deals. This business owns 15 shops mostly in towns and city centres. 180 people are employed in its shops and 60 people in its head office. The employees in these shops have not been trained in customer service. They are expected to read information leaflets that come with the products, so they know little about the products they are selling. Customer complaints are increasing. In some towns there are both EE shops and Budget Deals shops. The Managing Director of EE says 'The business will gain from economies of scale with this take-over'.

EE plans to cut jobs!

The shopworkers' Trade Union is worried about possible job losses. The planned take-over of Budget Deals by EE could lead to redundancy (retrenchment). It is expected that some shops will close and not all the employees will have a job in the remaining shops. It is not clear which workers will lose their jobs. An EE spokesman said 'It might depend on experience, length of employment with the company and their age'.

The Trade Union is negotiating with EE to see if a solution can be found. Will industrial action be taken?

Memorandum

To: Manager Director of EE
From: Purchasing Manager of EE
Date: 24 May 2007
Re: Should we change our suppliers?

The exchange rate of our country has increased (appreciated) against other countries' currencies over recent months. The only currency that it has remained stable against is the currency of Country Z. We buy most of our supplies from Country Z. The quality of our supplies from Country Z manufacturers is high. They do not break down very often. The quality of supplies from firms in other countries is not as good but it is improving.

Country Z has a good road system and deliveries from the factories do not take very long.

Do we need to consider changing our suppliers?
